Ideas Festival Emory

Ideas Festival Emory is a free event for the community, offered annually by the Center for Public Scholarship & Engagement at Oxford College of Emory University. Featuring exhibitions, live music and performances, games for kids, food and drinks, and conversations and presentations from producers all across the creative spectrum, Ideas Festival Emory is an opportunity for Oxford College to invite one and all to campus to be a part of the conversation.

ROSANNE CASH

Get ready for a special live taping of the Sing for Science podcast with host Matt Whyte, featuring Rosanne Cash, Grammy-winning singer-songwriter and acclaimed author, in conversation with Dr. Robyn Fivush, Distinguished University Professor of Psychology at Emory University.

Together, they'll dive into the magic of storytelling, exploring how music, memory, and family shape who we are. With live conversation, captivating insights, and moments of musical reflection, this keynote promises to inspire, move, and leave you thinking differently about the stories we tell—and the lives we live.
